U.S. drought could mean good news for province's farmers

Sunny prospects. Saskatchewan farmers could reap benefits as wilting outlook for American corn crop pushes up prices of other commodities

A miserable year for farmers in the U.S. could result in Saskatchewan farmers cashing in.

Agricultural commentator Kevin Hursch says the United States is seeing some its worst drought conditions in more than half a century.

A recent report says 55 per cent of the country is in a moderate to extreme drought.

The outlook for the all-important American corn crop has dramatically declined, pushing up prices for other commodities and eventually for a range of consumer goods.

Hursch says it's sending many Canadian prices higher as well, particularly canola and feed barley.

He says Saskatchewan in particular could benefit from this.

"Saskatchewan producers, many of them, are looking at the potential for a very good year," he said. "Not only are prices good for most all commodities, but in many areas of Saskatchewan, prospects are for a very good crop as well."

It's a confluence of circumstances he says doesn't happen very often.

"Often times those things don't come together. Often times when you have a good crop the price is low or the prices shoot high but you're part of the production shortfall and you don't have a good crop to sell."

Hursch is quick to acknowledge that not every farmer will "luck out."

There could be conditions beyond their control that could hinder their crops, but he says overall prospects are still very good.

Fair to excellent condition

Province's crops coming up spades

According to the most recent crop report, issued by Saskatchewan Agriculture, most crops in the province are in fair to excellent condition.

Ninety-two per cent of the hay crop in Saskatchewan so far this season is rated as good to excellent in quality, and 70 per cent of the fall cereals are doing just as well. The mostly warm and dry weather "allowed for significant haying progress over the past week," according to the report.

The crops that aren't in good condition were damaged by the extreme weather the province has been seeing. "Disease, flooding, hail and wind are causing the majority of crop damage," the report read. METRO

Farmers in towns like Pense, Sask., and throughout the province, are expected to benefit from the extreme heat south of the border. FLICKR.COM: SUECAN1

Public speaks out

Exec committee approves Riders' stadium funding

At Wednesday's City of Regina Executive Council meeting, the memorandum of understanding between the City of Regina, the province of Saskatchewan and the Saskatchewan Roughriders Football Club was approved.

The topic will be brought before city council on Monday, but Wednesday's meeting was the first opportunity the public has had to officially chime in on the agreement since it was announced before the Riders game on Saturday.

Greg Hanwell, a Regina business owner, believes there was not enough consultation of business owners and the public before the announcement.

"The stadium has the potential to do more than provide a new home for the Riders — it could change the city," said Hanwell to the committee. "Rushing into things for political or fiscal expediency might not be the most prudent long-term solution."

A full conception of what the $278-million stadium will look like will not be available to the public until September.

Asia-Pacific Gateway driving to prosperity

Feds seek input from Saskatchewan on pinch-points when it comes to transporting resources

JANE CAULFIELD
jane.caulfield@metronews.ca

The federal government is looking to Saskatchewan for input on how to improve infrastructures that specifically relate to the transport of imports and exports from Asia.

Ed Fast, minister for the Asia-Pacific Gateway, said that as original initiatives — such as the Circle Drive South project in Saskatoon — near completion, the government is starting to look ahead.

This means it's seeking "input from all of the key stakeholders to find out what remaining pinch-points are there in our transportation system when it comes to getting our resource products out to market," he said.

Fast added when federal, provincial and municipal governments and private sectors collaborate on projects, such as infrastructure, prosperity is ensured.

"Our Asia-Pacific Gateway strategy is a pan-Canadian strategy. It's about driving prosperity in every region of our country. It's not just about Western Canada, it's about Central Canada," said Fast.

Highlighting Canada's top market position for many commodities, such as potash, Fast said that the strategy has been about making supply chains between Asia and North America more efficient.

"The more efficient we are, the more price-competitive we get and the more vibrant those markets will be for Canadian producers."

Fast was in Saskatoon to meet with execs from Potash Corp., Canpotex and Transport Canada July 18 at the Cory potash mine.

The Asia-Pacific Gateway and Corridor Initiative launched in 2006, and has seen close to $4 billion worth of investment being made in Asia-Pacific Gateway infrastructure projects.

REUBEN ROSS

Pilot Butte synchronized diver in search of Olympic podium

ADDICTED TO BEING AIRBORNE

Reuben Ross never liked being grounded.

When the Pilot Butte and former University of Miami synchronized diver was seven, his parents bought him a trampoline. Shortly after, Ross discovered his addiction to being airborne.

"He liked to be in the air. Whether it was a trampoline or jumping a BMX bike over ramps. We thought it would be safer in the air when he came down into water, rather than pavement, so we enrolled him in diving," said Ross's father, Nat.

Ross, 26, will compete in the men's synchronized three-metre springboard event in London at the Olympic Summer Games. After nearly medalling at the 2008 Beijing Olympics, Ross has the podium in his crosshairs.

However, in June, Ross' diving partner, Alexandre Despatie, suffered a concussion, putting the pair's Olympic ambitions in jeopardy.

"With sports, there are unpredictable events," said Ross. "Since we've not been able to train much together I am just diving, trying to get better and ensuring that I am prepared for whenever Alex is ready to dive together. His recovery is going great; he's not only diving again but he's diving great," said Ross via email from London.

Ross' friends and family — 39 of them — will make the Olympic trek to cheer him on. Two of these fans, his grandmothers, Gladys White, 93, and Gina Ross, 90, were born in Britain and are excited to return to the motherland to watch Ross dive.

"What's more amazing is the dedication and determination of my grandmothers," Ross said. "Since they were both born in England it makes these Games more special. I've been doing everything in my power to ensure that I give them a good show."

How rigorous is your training?

"Twenty-five hours a week, six days a week. Sunday is our only sleep-in day. When I go to the pool I am not going there to relax — I go there to get better."

What would you do with an Olympic medal?

"Show my family. They've given me so much support over the years. It would be my way of giving back. After, I might put it in a big glass of Crown Royal and Coke as a celebratory drink."

Rebels penetrated the heart of Syria's power elite Wednesday, detonating a bomb inside a high-level crisis meeting in Damascus that killed three leaders of the regime, including President Bashar Assad's brother-in-law and the defence minister.

The unprecedented blow to the ruling dynasty could mark a turning point in the civil war, suggesting that those once close to Assad are turning against him. The bombing follows some of the worst bloodshed in Damascus of the 16-month uprising, a growing list of high-ranking defections and mounting frustration by world leaders over their inability to find a diplomatic solution.

Rebels claimed responsibility for the attack, saying they had been planning it for two months and decided to plant the bomb in the room where the top government security officials in charge of crushing the revolt were holding a crisis meeting. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bulgaria. Bus carrying Israelis explodes in resort

A bus carrying Israeli youth exploded Wednesday in a Bulgarian resort, killing at least four people and wounding more than two dozen, police and hospital officials said. Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu called it "an Iranian terror attack" and promised a tough response.

The explosion took place in the Black Sea city of Burgas, some 400 kilometres east of the capital, Sofia. TV images showed smoke billowing from the scene — a parking lot at the local airport where the Israeli tourists had apparently just landed. Several buses and cars were on fire near the shell of the exploded vehicle.

Cambodia. Schools are closed to cope with disease

Cambodia is closing all kindergarten and primary schools two weeks before a regular vacation to try to stop the spread of a virus that has killed hundreds of young children around Asia.

Deputy Education Minister Mak Van said more than 2,700 kindergartens and 7,000 primary schools closed Wednesday to try to cope with the menacing form of hand, foot and mouth disease known as enterovirus 71 strain, or EV-71.

The victims sometimes suffer high fever, brain swelling, paralysis and respiratory shutdown, though they may have been infected by people with few or no symptoms. The recent deaths of almost 60 Cambodian children raised the alarm over the disease.

Vietnam and China have also had outbreaks. And in neighbouring Thailand, three schools in Bangkok closed Wednesday over new cases in students.

Worship. Judge orders opening of U.S. mosque

A U.S. federal judge Wednesday ordered a county in the southern state of Tennessee to move ahead with opening a Muslim congregation's newly built mosque after a two-year fight from opponents.

The Islamic Center of Murfreesboro sued Rutherford County earlier in the day and asked District Judge Todd Campbell for an emergency order to let worshippers into the building before the holy month of Ramadan starts Thursday.

Federal prosecutors also filed a similar lawsuit.

The future of the mosque had been in question since May, when a local judge overturned the county's approval of the mosque construction. This month he ordered the county not to issue an occupancy permit for the building.

Campbell ordered the county to move ahead on approving the mosque for use, although it wasn't immediately clear if that could happen by Thursday. Final inspection of the building is required.

The contentious fight over the mosque stems from a 2010 lawsuit filed by residents who claimed that Islam was not a real religion and that local Muslims intended to overthrow the U.S. Constitution in favour of Islamic religious law.

Carney says he'll help reform LIBOR system amid rigging scandal

Mark Carney says he intends to use his position as head of the international Financial Stability Board (FSB) to take up the issue of reforming the scandal-plagued interbank-lending system at the earliest opportunity.

The Canadian central banker said Wednesday he's already exchanged views with his counterparts in the world's leading economies and plans to discuss possible reforms in September, when FSB officials next meet. Carney said he and U.S. counterpart Ben Bernanke agree that LIBOR, the London interbank offered rate — which sets terms under which banks lend each other funds and influences other interest rates — is structurally flawed.

"The facts that have emerged around the LIBOR situation are deeply troubling," he told reporters in Ottawa in his first public comments since the scandal over rate-rigging broke this spring.

LIBOR has been discredited recently by evidence that some of the banks that set the benchmark have provided false information in order to support their positions as far back as 2008. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Funding cuts to lower cable and satellite bills

Broadcasting. The CRTC is phasing out a local-programming fund aimed at helping stations during the 2008 recession

Cable and satellite bills will be shrinking a little bit as the CRTC begins to phase out a special fund designed to boost local programming.

The Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission issued a decision Wednesday, saying that the Local Programming Improvement Fund will be phased out over the next two years. It was introduced during the 2008 recession to help conventional stations operating in non-metropolitan areas.

Many cable and satellite providers passed along the 1.5 per cent fee of the recurring monthly bill to consumers, and the CRTC says they can expect a corresponding reduction in their cable or satellite bills as the fee is phased out.

In 2010, 78 stations received funding totalling $100 million. In 2011 80 stations received $106 million.

"The fund was created to ensure television stations had the resources to meet Canadians' needs for local programming. We are satisfied with the support it has provided during a difficult economic period," said Leonard Katz, CRTC's vice-chairman of telecommunications and chair of the hearing panel.

The CRTC said the financial situation of these broadcasters has improved due to a recovery in the advertising sector as well as a successful transition to digital television. It said it was confident that these stations will maintain the same quality of programming without support from the fund.

Cable and satellite companies must prepare a report by Sept. 17, outlining the measures taken to ensure that the bills of affected consumers will reflect these reductions, and they must also provide evidence that consumers have been notified or that they were never required to pay the contribution.

Upcoming cuts

Beginning Sept. 1, required contributions will be cut to one per cent of gross broadcasting revenue, and on Sept. 1, 2013, the fee will be cut to 0.5 per cent of gross broadcasting revenue.

- By Sept. 1, 2014, the fund will be discontinued.

Microsoft. Windows 8 set for release in October

Microsoft says Windows 8 will go on sale Oct. 26. The upgrade to its operating system is designed to work better with touch screens and on tablet computers.

Microsoft announced the date in a blog post and at its annual sales meeting Wednesday.

The software company had said earlier that Windows 8 would go on sale in October.

Microsoft is releasing the software as a downloadable upgrade that day for PC owners, and letting PC makers start selling computers with Windows 8 the same day.

The future is in e-retailers: Report

Big-box retailers are starting to feel the heat from online retailers like Amazon, concludes a new report on the future of retail. MATT CARDY/GETTY IMAGES FILE

The future of retail is in the palm of your hand.

"Big box retailers like Best Buy and Walmart are starting to feel the heat as sales decline in the face of stiffer competition from e-retailers like Amazon," declares the third annual Future of Retail report from trend-watchers PSFK.

"Showrooming is the new reality."

Meaning, explains PSFK founder and president Piers Fawkes, customers are already using their mobile phones to shop and retailers have to stop fighting and join in.

"There's a great opportunity to provide personal service," says Fawkes. "Technology is pretty cheap compared with the proprietary systems of the past."

The future, then, lies in combing that mobile, roving database customers are carrying with brick-and-mortar shopping.

Fawkes uses the example of trying to find a jacket online.

Currently he has to rifle through 100,000 jackets he doesn't want first. Soon, retailers will know how to show him two or three that meet all his criteria.

LIFE SUCKS AND THEN YOU DIET

HE SAYS...
John Mazerolle
metronews.ca/hesays

This is hard to swallow, but I think the weight-loss industry may have some ethical problems.

I know. It's one of those instances where our illusions are shattered and our innocence is lost, like when the emperor in the Star Wars prequels turned out to be evil.

But I'm convinced it's true.

As an in-depth researcher of societal trends (I read Google News), I've noticed that a new weight-loss drug or diet plan or study is released almost every day.

The drug is usually approved by the authorities, but has a list of side effects as long and painful to read as Atlas Shrugged.

And the diet plan, even if it works, usually charges you to do something you could do on your own ("Order our Triple-A 'Activity Addition Abacus' for only $19.95!").

Fatten down

"The diet plan, even if it works, usually charges you to do something you could do on your own ('Order our Triple-A 'Activity Addition Abacus' for only $19.95!').

What makes it worse is all the self-evident studies. Either it's a "positive" study showing, for instance, that running a marathon is linked to looking good in shorts, or it's a "negative" study that shows, say, a possible connection between heart disease and freebasing gravy.

The upshot is, we all know losing weight is hard, but we also know the proper way to deal with it.

I am, of course, talking about the only solution: Mazerolle-Brand Diet Products! Yes! With my unique line of inexpensive weight-loss tools, people will be asking if you've been recently ill or your money back.

My products:

- The Diet Diary: New findings suggest that the best way to lose weight is to keep a food diary. But what does it say about your self-esteem if you scratch out your meals on some random piece of paper? If you care about yourself, you'll buy my handsome pleather-bound Duo-Tang, complete with example entries to get you started: "Dear Diary, I like bacon sooo much. 'Like' like! But does bacon even know I exist?"
- The Self-Dismemberment Diet: Also known as SDD, is a quick and easy plan to lose weight. Would you give your right arm to lose weight? Then do it! Worried about side effects? Remove a side! To help stop the bleeding, order a Mazerolle Diet Plan Tourniquet.
- Bachelor's Package: This is the linchpin. You'll learn my own personal tricks for staying thin, such as losing your debit card on the weekend, or reminding yourself that if you cook it will mean doing dishes. Also, I lost 20 pounds (really) when the Boston Bruins made their 2011 Stanley Cup run, mostly due to stress. So cheer on a successful team. (WARNING: If you are waiting on a Canadian NHL team, you will balloon to 400 pounds.)

Don't weight until it's too late to push back the scale. ISTOCK

And those are my completely ethical weight-loss products. I hope you find them helpful.

One parting tip is to remember that dieting is still about eating, not starving yourself. When I get peckish, I feel free to open the fridge and treat myself to whatever's in there — usually a box of baking soda and a jar of capers. If that doesn't help you lose weight, nothing will.

Printing error puts author in a Funk

Cherry Blossoms. Wes Funk recalls his third book from stores; release now moved to August

BACKSTAGE PASS
Simon Hiatt
saskatoon@metronews.ca

The release of a new book is typically an exciting day for an author; finally getting to share their labour of love with readers, often after years of working on it in isolation.

Wes Funk is the exception to the rule; he doesn't want you to read his novel Cherry Blossoms, which hit bookstore shelves a month ago.

It's not a marketing ploy or false modesty, but instead the result of an error that caused an early draft of the novel to be published instead of the finished product. It had been on sale for a week before he discovered the mistake.

"That moment was horrific for me; I just felt instantly sick to my stomach. It was just really alarming," said Funk.

He describes the version that went to print as more primitive than the finalized draft and says it contains numerous typographical errors. The differences were glaring enough that he took the unusual step of pulling his own book off the shelves.

"As far as we know all of the unsold books have been shipped back to my publisher in Regina and she's destroying them."

Funk and Your Nickel's Worth Publishing have been working with stores to get back copies that have been sold, spreading the word about the error through social media. Purchased copies can be returned to the store where they were bought, the publishing house or even to Funk directly. He promises he will take whatever steps necessary to get the correct version into fans' hands.

The novel is Funk's third, following the highly successful Dead Rock Stars and Baggage. He describes it as a down to earth story about a woman who reaches a crossroads in her life when her son goes off to university and her marriage falls apart. She leaves rural life behind for a new beginning in Saskatoon.

"I worked really hard at working iconic Saskatchewan landmarks into the storyline, so that people could really relate to the character and feel like they're walking in her shoes."

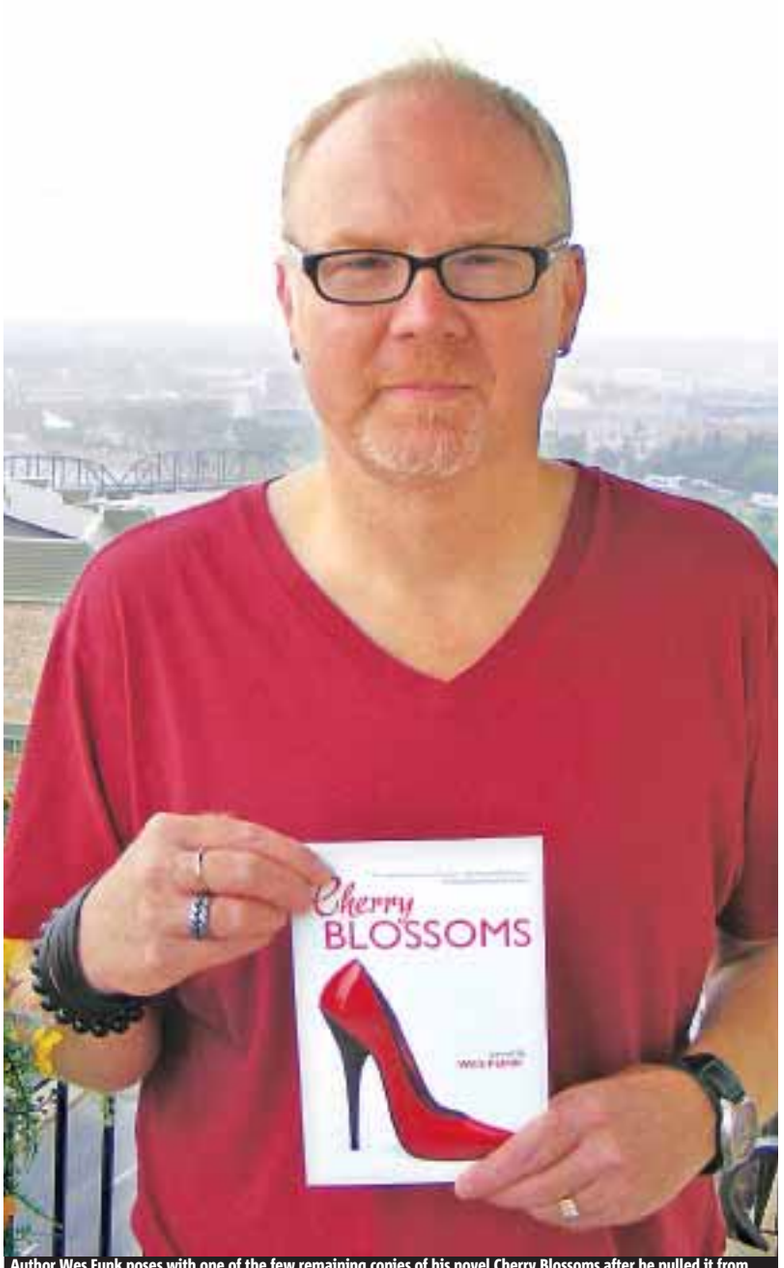
The version of Cherry Blossoms he had intended to release will now hit bookstores in August, following three and a half years of writing and this unexpected delay.

"It will be a great feeling," said Funk. "It's been quite a summer, I don't think I'm ever going to forget it."

Valuable

Funk isn't the only author who has fallen victim to printing mistakes. Errors are typically harmless, sometimes funny, other times offensive, and once in awhile valuable:

- A 1631 version of the King James Bible became known as The Wicked Bible because it included the commandment "Thou shalt commit adultery." Copies today sell for about $100,000.
- An Australian publisher had to recall 7,000 copies of a cookbook because a recipe called for "salt and freshly ground black people."
- Early editions of Harry Potter and the Prisoner of Azkaban, which credit the book to Joanne Rowling instead of the more commonly known J.K. Rowling, can sell for up to $10,000.



Author Wes Funk poses with one of the few remaining copies of his novel Cherry Blossoms after he pulled it from bookstore shelves. SIMON HIATT/FOR METRO

The award goes to...

The first time Kathleen Edwards was shortlisted for the Polaris Music Prize back in 2008, she didn't know much about the award. But it's a sign of how much the $30,000 prize's profile has grown over the past four years that the Ottawa singer/songwriter felt very differently when she was nominated for a second time on Tuesday. She joined an eclectic 10-artist short list that also includes Toronto rapper Drake, Vancouver rock duo Japandroids and Calgary-reared songstress Feist. The Polaris Music Prize — awarded to the top Canadian album of the year based strictly on merit and not sales — is voted on by 200-plus music journalists, bloggers and broadcasters.

Tom Cruise gets first visit with Suri since divorce

Tom Cruise had his first visit with daughter Suri since he finalized his divorce settlement with Katie Holmes, according to Us Weekly.

The actor flew overnight from the California set of Oblivion to spend time with the six-year-old in New York, where paparazzi spotted Cruise carrying Suri around, her head buried in his shoulder.

"Katie wants to make sure the visits are in the context of him being a parent figure," a source recently told the magazine. "He adores Suri, but now he's afraid he won't be able to have a close relationship with her."

Limbaugh trying to get a rise out of Dark Knight fans

THE WORD
Monica Weymouth
scene@metronews.ca

Rush Limbaugh is like a cat on a diet — it's best to ignore his constant whining and pawing until it's truly impossible to read the paper in peace.

Unfortunately, today is one of those days, so you'll have to excuse us as we tune in to his thoughts on The Dark Knight Rises.

On his Tuesday radio show, Limbaugh laid out an impressive conspiracy theory, even for him: The villain of the latest Batman flick is named Bane, which he believes is a reference to the venture capital firm presumptive Republican presidential candidate Mitt Romney worked for. Take it away, Rush.

"Do you think that it is accidental that the name of the really vicious fire-breathing, four-eyed whatever in this movie is named Bane?" he asked. "A lot of people are going to see the movie — and it's a lot of brain-dead people, entertainment, the pop-culture crowd — and they're going to hear Bane in the movie and they're going to associate Bain. The thought is that when they start paying attention to the campaign later in the year, and Obama and the Democrats keep talking about Bain, Romney and Bain, that these people will think back to the Batman movie — 'Oh, yeah, I know who that is.'"

Rush, we're going to excuse the "brain-dead" comment in the hope that it's a zombie reference — we mindless pop-culture people like our zombies.

But we also have to point out that the character of Bane first surfaced in the 1993 comic and also appeared in the 1997 film Batman & Robin.

Now, as for Heath Ledger's spectacularly, award-winningly deranged Joker? We can't promise there wasn't a little GOP inspiration there.

Lopez looked through Casper when they first met

In his first public comments about his relationship with Jennifer Lopez, Casper Smart admits he didn't see fireworks the first time they met.

"I don't think it was for either of us," Smart says when asked by Good Morning America if it was love at first sight for him and Lopez.

"It was just very natural how it happened. There was nothing before, no flirting, nothing."

New Bond film Skyfall marks 50 years of girls, gadgets and 007 charm. Here, the film's costume designer Jany Temime talks tight trunks and getting up close and personal with Daniel Craig's 'perfect body'

life@metronews.ca

Since James Bond first hit the screen in 1962's Dr. No, 007 has been privy to a bevy of top tailors and international designers. The latest is Jany Temime, costume designer of this fall's Skyfall — and long-time Harry Potter costumer. She's charged with bringing Bond into 2012 while respecting his legacy.

"James Bond is such an iconic figure, so in one way you have to modernize it, but on the other side you have to respect people's expectations," she tells Metro.

Daniel Craig is the sixth Bond to step into the breach and puts his body on the line for Queen and Country with the good fortune of having Tom Ford's tailoring as his body armor of choice. "We decided to settle for something very body-conscious in muted colors like soft blues and grays. First, he has a lovely body," she says, with a laugh, "so it was quite interesting to use it and second, it helps to follow all his movements."

The French-born designer assures me that she took inspiration from the '60s, with a nod to the first Bond played by Sean Connery. "It has a modernized '60s allure but not boxy like a suit from that era. The suit has narrow lapels, high-waisted, tight trousers that just break on the shoes and cut in lightweight fabrics such as fine wool and mohair."

Tight tailoring and a fixed glare, ready for action SONY

Body-skimming tailoring is one asset that Bond has never been shy of bearing all for the camera — and we'll see his legs in this installment.

"His light blue shorts, they're very iconic of Bond and why not? Daniel Craig has the body to use them," she lets slip. When asked if they're similar to Connery's Dr. No trunks, she responds, "Well, let's just say that the shape and the colour could be similar. I'm not allowed to tell you that, I suppose!"

Designing 007

Designing 007: 50 Years of Bond Style, a new exhibit in London, features the looks of Bond past, including:

Matchy-matchy Bond girls

Dr. No and Die Another Day.

Gadgets and gizmos

Jaws' Teeth: Moonraker & The Spy Who Loved Me

The Golden Gun: The Man With The Golden Gun

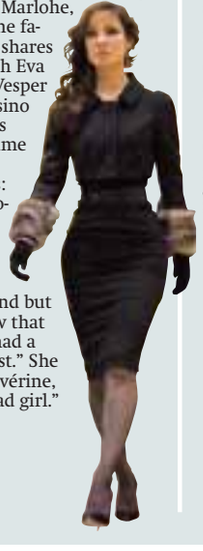
Here's a look at what else we'll see

Eve, the co-worker

"She's the colleague that you shouldn't play with; that very sexy 'girl next door' kind of look," says Temime. Gents, it certainly appears that the high-octane action scenes are not the only thing that'll excite as the designer enthuses, "Eve (Naomie Harris) has the most amazing body and the most beautiful bottom (gasps). I used bright colours, a yellow skirt, orange dress and beige because of the colour of her skin – it brings a warmth and a flash in the film."

Sévérine, the Bond girl

"I was inspired by the film noir and the '50s — she has that aura of classic beauty," says Temime. It seems Sévérine, played by the sultry Bérénice Marlohe, is a femme fatale who shares traits with Eva Green's Vesper Lynd (Casino Royale) as the costume designer describes: "She is somebody who you never quite understand but you know that she has had a heavy past." She adds, "Sévérine, she's a bad girl."



Temime on Bond baddie Silva

"Oh, Javier (Bardem) is completely different. He has a touch of sexual danger," says Temime, who continues the movie's sexual trope. Although Bardem's role in the film is being kept hush-hush, he does at one stage appear like many Bond villains before him with a blond hairdo. The costume designer reveals: "His suits are from a Savile Row tailor. If James Bond is an English gentleman in every situation, Javier is not in all."

Famous fanny: Gaga bares bod for fragrance

Lady Gaga has revealed her body yet again in an advert for her first fragrance Lady Gaga Fame. The ad campaign, shot by world-famous fashion photographer Steven Klein, features a reclining nude Gaga wearing a black mask as she holds the gold-topped fragrance bottle in an outstretched hand. Luckily for Gaga, her intimate areas are dutifully hidden by what appear to be mask-wearing, thong-clad miniature mythical warriors — 'Little monsters' perhaps? The scent's ingredients are listed as Tears of Belladonna, crushed heart of tiger orchidea, with a black veil of incense, pulverized apricot, and the combinative essences of saffron and honey drops." Bizarre, yes, but suitably kooky.

Superfood makes super pasta

Any variety of kale is fine in this super easy pasta dish as everything is cooked in one pot, says Sharon Hanna, author of The Book of Kale.

Feel free to use mature leaves as they'll be whirled with goat cheese to create a strikingly green pesto that melts into the hot pasta. If you have calendula in your garden, be sure to garnish the pasta with some edible orange petals — nasturtiums work too.

This is suitable for vegetarians and those on a gluten-free diet if non-gluten pasta is used.

1. Bring a large pot of salted water to a boil. Add garlic and shallots and boil gently for 4 minutes. Add kale leaves and continue to boil for another minute. Watch the pot — you want the kale to remain bright green.

2. Using a slotted spoon, remove kale to a colander. Scoop out garlic and shallots and transfer them to the bowl of a food processor. Leave pot with water at a boil. Drop pasta into boiling water.

3. While pasta is cooking, squeeze excess moisture from kale. Add to food processor along with cheese, pine nuts, salt, pepper and lemon juice. Process while adding olive oil slowly, until mixture is creamy.

4. Let pesto mixture stand until pasta is cooked to the desired texture.

5. Drain pasta well and combine with puréed mixture. Before serving, sprinkle with extra goat's cheese and fresh thyme leaves, if desired.

Ingredients

- 6 large garlic cloves, peeled
- 2 or 3 small shallots, peeled
- 2 l (8 cups) kale leaves, packed
- 350 g (12 oz) dried farfalle (bowtie pasta)
- 250 g (8 oz) soft goat's cheese, plus extra for topping
- 45 ml (3 tbsp) pine nuts
- Salt and black pepper, to taste
- 45 ml (3 tbsp) lemon juice
- 125 ml (1/2 cup) extra-virgin olive oil
- Fresh thyme leaves (optional)

Tackle household germs

What are the most common areas for germs in the average household?

You might be surprised to learn there are more germs in the average household kitchen than in the bathroom!

Why? We know about the bacteria in our bathroom and make more of an effort to clean it. But we often don't see or understand bad bacteria in the kitchen or in the remainder of the house.

Here are four common areas that harbour germs and bacteria around your home:

1. The kitchen sponge: Replace often and wash daily. You can put it in the microwave for one minute on high or in the dishwasher with the full drying cycle to kill bacteria.

2. The remote control: Did you know in hotels the remote is the one item with the most bacteria? Use a cotton swab with alcohol weekly.

3. The telephone and cell phone: Use a cotton swab with alcohol weekly.

4. Door knobs of the bathroom and front door: These also need to be cleaned weekly.

Your kitchen sponge may have more germs than your toilet. ISTOCK IMAGES

No date-rape charge for Kings' Doughty

Prosecutors have declined to file a date-rape charge against Los Angeles Kings star Drew Doughty, citing insufficient evidence.

The Los Angeles County District Attorney's Office issued a report Wednesday concluding there was not enough evidence to prove the case beyond a reasonable doubt.

A woman who accused Doughty of raping her said she had consensual sex with him previously.

She told of drinking with him at a Hermosa Beach bar, then going to his home, where she alleged he assaulted her.

O'Brien, Gryba re-up with Sens

The Ottawa Senators re-signed forward Jim O'Brien and defenceman Eric Gryba to two-year contracts Wednesday.

O'Brien was recalled from the Senators' AHL affiliate in February.

The 23-year-old had three goals and three assists in 28 games and one assist in the playoffs.

Gryba's deal, meanwhile, is a two-way contract. The Saskatoon native spent all of last season in the AHL, where he recorded five goals, 15 assists and 98 penalty minutes in 73 games.

Calgary quarterback Kevin Glenn knows Rider Nation will be on hand to give Saskatchewan a boost in its bid to remain the league's only undefeated team

It's not going to get any easier for Calgary's newly minted starting quarterback Kevin Glenn.

With Drew Tate electing to have shoulder surgery that will sideline the quarterback for the rest of the CFL season, Glenn has stepped into the starter's role but is off to a shaky start.

Glenn threw a costly interception late in the game against Montreal and the Alouettes rallied to beat Calgary 33-32.

He said he's put that game behind him and is ready to guide Calgary in an important divisional match against the unbeaten Saskatchewan Roughriders on Thursday at McMahon Stadium.

"The biggest thing for us as an offence is to stay on the field, keep their offence off the field and put points on the board," Glenn said Wednesday. "What we can do is we can come out here and give 100 per cent on the field and try our best to produce wins for the fans."

Glenn, 33, started his career in Saskatchewan, where he played three seasons with the Riders from 2001-03 before going on to suit up for the Winnipeg Blue Bombers, the Tiger-Cats and now the Stamps.

Roughriders quarterback Darian Durant has no doubt that Glenn has the ability to bounce back with a solid performance after two straight road losses.

"He's never really been a guy that gets down after a big game," Durant said. "He always bounces back. He always gives his team an opportunity to win.

Saskatchewan's rookie head coach Corey Chamblin hopes vocal Riders fans help his team to a fourth straight win to start the season.

"We're 3-0 and hopefully there's more green than red here, then I'd really love it," Chamblin said.

NHL labour talks remain peaceful for now

The NHL and the NHL Players' Association resumed labour talks at the league offices in New York on Wednesday.

The two sides held a cordial meeting for more than two hours in another round of negotiations for a new collective bargaining agreement before the current one expires on Sept. 15.

Executive director Donald Fehr said the NHLPA has not yet decided to make a counter-offer to the league's initial proposal last week.

"We requested further information," Fehr said. "The initial proposal we are looking hard at.

"We're not at that stage (to submit a counter) yet. At the appropriate point in time, we'll make our proposal."

There were multiple reports coming out of the last round of talks that the owners' offer included players' hockey-related revenues getting slashed from 57 per cent to 46 per cent. It also was reported that players would be forced to wait 10 years before becoming unrestricted free agents and that contracts would be limited to five years.

Fehr said the NHLPA would submit a proposal "at the appropriate point in time." He did not specify when that would be.

NHL commissioner Gary Bettman said the league's offer last week was a "serious proposal." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Diving. One more podium finish will put Canadian legend in league of her own

Emilie Heymans could earn a special place in the annals of the Olympic Games this summer in London.

A podium finish in one of her two events would make her the first diver in history to win a medal at four consecutive Olympics.

Her record is already impressive: She has won at least one medal in each of the major multi-sport games — Olympic, Commonwealth and Pan American — since her arrival on the international scene in 1999. In addition to her 15 medals, she won the 2003 world championship in the 10-metre tower and was runner-up in the three-metre springboard at the worlds in 2009.

But Heymans is not the type to dwell on her list of accomplishments. Leave that to her biggest fan, her father Eric Heymans.

"My father is very involved in my career," says the 30-year-old diver. "He manages my sponsorship and media requests. I consult him often and he's the person whose opinion matters most to me."

In fact, Heymans has always relied on the support of both her parents throughout her career. Both were elite athletes in their own time.

Eric Heymans played soccer in Belgium, his home country, and her mother, Marie-Paule Van Eyck, competed in Montreal's 1976 Olympics as a member of the Belgian fencing team.

"We have always considered it a privilege to support her career," said her father.

No matter what happens in London, Heymans has already realized her dream.

"My childhood dream was just to go to the Olympics," says Heymans. "It remained a dream and I didn't think I could achieve it. So to have taken part four times, it's really extraordinary."

After the London Games, Heymans plans to retire from diving to begin another career she believes will be just as exciting. With a degree in fashion marketing, she's working on developing her own line of swimwear.

Playing hurt just part of Olympic sacrifice

When Canada's Olympic athletes prepare to dig in their oars, power down the track or execute a gravity-defying manoeuvre on the uneven bars, many may start with a silent prayer: "Please, God, don't let me get injured."

Pushing their bodies to the limits of physical endurance, competitors are all too aware they could pull a hamstring, sprain an ankle or worse.

"Injuries are unfortunately an inevitable part of physical performance," concedes Dr. Penny Werthner, a sports psychologist at the University of Ottawa who works with the national canoe-kayak team and diver Emilie Heymans.

And while most athletes gunning for Olympic medals are reluctant to speak about it publicly, many are likely nursing sore muscles and joints and keeping tabs on other not-quite-perfectly healed injuries as they prepare for London.

"I think every athlete who reaches any kind of high-performance role at the world and Olympic level has probably had several serious injuries as a result of hard training, breaking something or pulling muscles," says Werthner.

Kyle Shewfelt is a case in point.

The Calgary gymnast captured the gold medal in floor exercises at the 2004 Olympics, but 11 months before the 2008 Games, he broke both upper tibias after a mistimed landing on the vault at a World Cup event.

Surgery and months of rehab, followed by hard training, allowed Shewfelt to compete at Beijing, though his performance couldn't match pre-injury levels. But even before shattering those shin bones, he was no stranger to serious injury.

In spring 2004, he severely bruised the main bone in his ankle and wasn't able to resume practising his routines until about a month before the Athens Games.

"Advil was my best friend," Shewfelt quips.

"I think many that are competing at the Olympic Games are on a heavy dose of anti-inflammatories. But it's just par for the course."

Basketball. With NBAers in town, largely ignored hoops gets some attention

The question would be almost unimaginable in North America.

"Who's No. 6?" a reporter asked a U.S. official.

Yes, even LeBron James isn't recognized everywhere in Britain, where soccer is king and basketball is an afterthought.

That will change at least briefly in Manchester on Thursday, with James and the U.S. Olympic team bringing it some rare attention with a game against Britain.

It's only an exhibition, so the result doesn't matter. But the event does, to those who want to see basketball gain a place in Britain's sports culture.

"This is a massive opportunity for British basketball to get some oxygen, to breathe life into the sport in this country," said Chris Mitchell, who calls Britain's games for BBC Radio. "Team USA being here is arguably the biggest-ever game this country has hosted." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Sex and the City move over. Here comes Sex in the Village. Make that athletes' village. As in Olympics.

Most will restrain from going too far, aware they're in the international spotlight.

Still, there's no need to be prudish, according to the man overseeing the health of the Brazilian team.
